PROFESSIONAL STATEMENT

I am a feminist political geographer with an interest in political agency, embodiment, and relationality. Empirically, I have explored these topics through ethnographic and other qualitative research on gender, youth, food and forests. My current research focuses on critically exploring geographies and ethics of care primarily through archival research, surveys and interviews. I seek to evaluate the conflicts and contradictions of care in non-traditional caregiving sites. Ultimately, I am curious about and eager to understand the ways that power relations at various scales impact and influence local and personal livelihoods.

KEY WORDS

Care ethics, gender, feminist political geography, children's geographies, food systems, sustainability, feminist theory, political ecology
